

Wedding Access Cards

Proposal

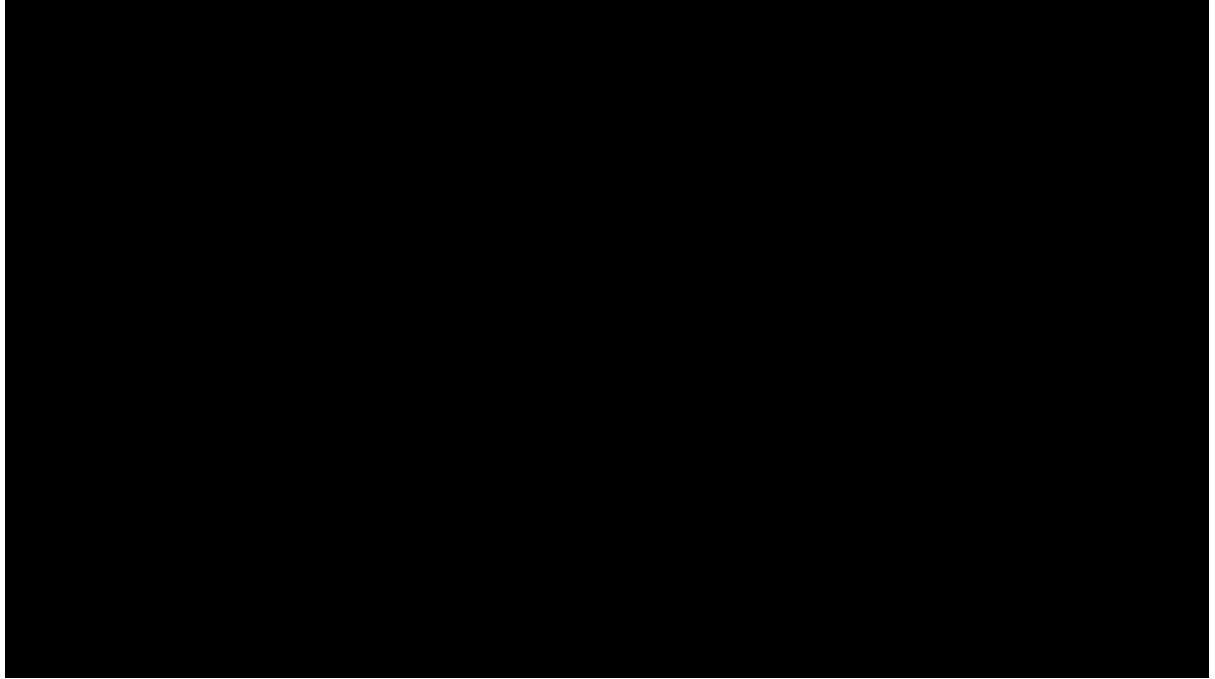

OPTION 1: The Access control cards serve as a visual representation of an invitation. Seat number will be embossed on the card so guests know what seats have been allocated to them.

Note: The Access No is the seat number so the ushers upon being shown the card know where to send the guests. Also note that the details on the card will be embossed in gold or silver as seen on a bank card.

Note: This is a Video and can only be viewed using PAGES as seen on an Apple MacBook

OPTION 2: The Access control cards will actually work as a stylish data card that will pull up any information you want on a big screen to let your guests know where they can be seated as such and to confirm wedding invites are authentic. Another little something to make your big day special.

How it works

- Guest come in
- They tap their cards on the device
- A message is displayed on the large screen at the entrance with a personal message inviting the guests in
- The message also includes the seat number. Reducing the need for too many ushers.
- Very different approach sure to get the blogs talking.

Note: However If you plan on having loads of guests. I won't recommend you go this route. The standard option1 would work better in that circumstance. Still stylish but much faster.

OPTION 3: The Access control cards will serve as a literal access to the entrance at the wedding reception. No real need for security. Just come with your wedding invite cards and swipe it to gain access to the venue.

Again, I will not recommend this if there are too many guests as it will cause a queue. Also, most wedding receptions are not access control modified and their doors would have to be fitted with access control equipment for the doors to open and close. If this can be sorted out with the venue managers then it will work easy.

PRICING

A quote is dependent on various factors. What option you choose. What colours the front and back of the cards are, if it's embossed or not, number of cards requested?
